Living with a rare disease

Interviews about your experiences

We are looking for people affected by a rare disease who would like to talk about their experiences in a video interview to share with others affected.

DIPEX Switzerland - Sharing Health Experiences

We are an interdisciplinary group of researchers from the Institute of Biomedical Ethics and History of Medicine at the University of Zurich. We collect and study patients' experiences through video interviews. By sharing narratives about coping with health and illness, we create a source of support for other affected people and their relatives.

Our Research

Our goal is to provide experiences from affected people for affected people on a clear and easily accessible website. On dipex.ch you will find videos, audio clips and texts with stories from people affected by a disease or other health issue. They talk about their life with the disease, their experiences in the health care system, how they cope with the disease in their family and at work, and much more. Dipex.ch is based on the website «healthtalk.org», which was set up in cooperation with Oxford University.

The Interview

If you are interested in sharing your knowledge, we would like to interview you. In the interview, you will have the opportunity to tell us about your experience with your disease. We conduct the interview at a location of your choice, insofar as the Covid19 situation allows; we are happy to come to your home or invite you to our institute. Alternatively, there is always the option of conducting the interview online. You can interrupt or cancel the interview at any time or withdraw your participation in the study. It is important to us that you are not unnecessarily burdened by the study.

Project Participation

We would be very pleased if you were interested in participating in our study. For further information, please do not hesitate to contact Dr. Sebastian Wäscher. You can contact him by e-mail, telephone or post.
